Introduction

THE INDEX TO CHILDREN'S POETRY is a dictionary index to 130 collections of poems for children and youth, with title, subject, author, and first line entries. More than 15,000 poems by approximately 2,500 different authors are classified under more than 1,800 different subjects.

Scope. The carefully selected list of books of poetry for children and youth which are indexed include collections for the very young child (e.g., books such as those classed in "Easy Books" in the Children's Catalog, Mother Goose, etc.); collections for the elementary school grades (e.g., the range of collections in class 821.08 in the Children's Catalog); and collections suitable for high school age (e.g., such collections as those found in class 821.08 in the Standard Catalog for High School Libraries). In addition to anthologies or collections of poetry by more than one poet, volumes by one poet (e.g., poems by Lewis Carroll, Walter De La Mare, etc.) are also indexed. Books partly in prose and partly in verse (e.g., Anthology of Children's Literature compiled by Edna Johnson and Carrie Emma Scott) and collections of poetry on one subject (e.g., Fifty Christmas Poems for Children edited by F. B. Hyett) are included. The inclusion of comprehensive and classic collections (e.g., Palgrave's Golden Treasury, Oxford Book of English Verse, Stevenson's Home Book of Modern Verse) classed as reference volumes in the Children's Catalog and Standard Catalog for High School Libraries give the index a wide range. The comprehensive scope of the books indexed insures the usefulness of the index to those interested in poetry from the nursery through the secondary school and beyond.

Selection of Collections Included. Selection of the 130 collections included is based on a list of titles voted on by collaborating librarians and teachers in various parts of the United States. A comprehensive list of anthologies and volumes of poetry by individual authors was sent to the selected collaborators, their advice secured, and the final selection made. A list of collaborators follows this Introduction.

Entries. Entries are of four types: title, subject, author, and reference from first line to title. The addition of collection symbols to title, subject, and author entries make these complete within themselves obviating the necessity for cross references.

KANSAS CITY (MO.) PUBLIC LIBRARY

1. TITLE ENTRY. The fullest information is given in this entry. Although the symbols designating the books in which the poems are to be found are given in author and subject entries as well as in title entries, the title entry is the only one which gives full name of author, when known, and full name of translator. References to the title entry have been made (a) from variant titles (e.g., The busy bee. See "How doth the little busy bee"); (b) from titles of selections to the source title (e.g., Where the bee sucks. See The tempest); and (c) from first lines (e.g., "The coach is at the door at last." See Farewell to the farm)

INDEX TO CHILDREN'S POETRY

as well as from variant first lines in different collections (e.g., "Cherrie ripe, ripe, ripe, I cry." See Cherry ripe ("Cherry ripe, ripe, ripe, I cry").

The title entry includes:

(a) Title, followed by first line in parentheses when needed to distinguish between poems with the same title.

(b) Variant titles, indented under the main title. When the same poem appears in different books with different titles, one title, generally the one appearing in the most collections, has been chosen as the title entry and all variations indented and listed under this title.

(c) Full name of author, when known.

(d) Full name of translator.

(e) Symbols for collections in which the poem is to be found.

In order to bring together selections from a single source, selections are listed under source titles. An example follows:

Alice's adventures in wonderland, sels.
 Lewis Carroll
 Father William. BuP—DaP—JoL—ScJ—
 UnR—UnS—UnSy
 You are old, Father William. BaT—
 CaC—GiP

All entries subordinated under source titles are entered in their alphabetical position and referred to the source entry. Examples follow:

Father William. See Alice's adventures in wonderland
You are old, Father William. See Alice's adventures in wonderland—Father William

A group title (e.g., A handful of limericks) has been subordinated as a variant to a title under which the poem appears in another book. Otherwise it has been subordinated to its own first line. Examples follow:

"A canner, exceedingly canny." Carolyn Wells
 Four tricky limericks. UnS—UnSy
 A handful of limericks. GiP
 Seven famous limericks. StH
An eggstravagance. Oliver Wendell Holmes.
 DaP—ScJ—UnSy
 Five limericks by famous authors. UnSy
 Seven famous limericks. StH

2. SUBJECT ENTRY. Entries are grouped by specific subjects. For example, under Animals are listed the poems about animals in general, while poems about specific animals are grouped under names of animals, as Dogs. A single poem is often classified under a number of subject headings (e.g., The ant and the cricket, is listed under the subject headings Ants; Fables; Crickets; Selfishness; and Diligence).

Both See and See also references have been made freely to and from related subjects. These are filed at the beginning of the entries for the subject (e.g., Flowers. See also Gardens and gardening; Plants; Trees; also names of flowers, as Roses).

In order that individual poems or selections from longer poems which have been subordinated to source titles in the title entries may be classified according to subject and may also be readily identified as to source, they have been entered under subject headings as follows:

Youth and age
Father William. From Alice's adventures in wonderland. L. Carroll. BuP—DaP—
JoL—ScJ—UnR—UnS—UnSy
You are old, Father William. BaT—
CaC—GiP

Variant titles and titles of selections subordinate to source titles are treated in the same way as under the title and author entries.

The subject entry gives:

- (a) Title, followed by first line in parentheses when needed to distinguish between poems with the same title.
- (b) Name, including initials, of author.
- (c) Symbols for collections in which the poem is to be found.

3. AUTHOR ENTRY. All titles are listed alphabetically under the name of the author. Variant titles and titles of selections subordinated under source titles are entered in their proper alphabetical place and referred to the main title or source title.

The author entry gives, under the full name of the author:

- (a) Title, followed by first line in parentheses when needed to distinguish between poems with the same title.
- (b) Symbols for collections in which the poem is to be found.
- (c) Cross references from variant titles to main titles.
- (d) Cross references from titles of selections to source titles.

4. FIRST LINE REFERENCES. The first line is always given in quotation marks, even when it is also the title. When the title differs from first line, reference is made from first line to title. References are also made from variant first lines to titles.

Arrangement. The arrangement is alphabetical. Articles are always retained at the beginning of title and first line, but the articles are disregarded in the alphabetizing. Such entries are alphabetized by the word following the article and this word is printed in boldface (e.g., The cat, is filed under C). Articles in dialect have been filed under both the dialect article and under the first word after the article (e.g., Da boy from Rome, is filed under B and Da boy from Rome, is filed under D) except that entries which are grouped under authors and subjects are entered only under the dialect article (e.g., Da boy from Rome, is filed only under D). Abbreviations are filed as if spelled in full (e.g., St is filed as Saint). Contractions are filed as one word (e.g., Who'd is filed as Whod). Hyphenated words are filed as separate words. An exception is made if the hyphen is really part of the word (e.g., A-hunting, To-day). To facilitate quick use the many entries beginning O and Oh have been filed together, under O. Likewise, names beginning Mac and Mc have been filed together, under Mac. Punctuation has been disregarded in filing.

Grades. The books have been graded and the grades are given in parentheses in the Analysis of Books Indexed and in the Key to Symbols. The grading is only approximate and is given to indicate in general the grades for which each book is suitable. A book that is comprehensive in nature and is suitable for a wide range of grades up to and beyond the twelfth grade is designated R, reference.

Uses. The INDEX should serve as a practical reference book for all who desire to locate children's poems by subject, author, title, or first line. It should prove especially useful to librarians, teachers in elementary and secondary schools, teachers and students of children's literature, radio artists, parents, youth, and children. The variety of subject classifications should be particularly useful to anyone preparing programs for special occasions, to teachers planning experiences around interests of children, to parents who desire to share poetry with children, and to anyone searching for poems on a given topic. The Analysis of Books Indexed which gives in detail the contents of each book, number of poems included, number of authors represented, and number of poems in each group or classification, should prove valuable in the selection of collections for purchase or use. The comprehensiveness of the books indexed insures the usefulness of the INDEX to those interested in poetry from the nursery through the secondary school and beyond.

Acknowledgments. The compilers thank the librarians who cooperated in answering questionnaires, and in checking lists of titles to be included. Julia Kraus gave invaluable assistance throughout the preparation of the INDEX. Evelyn Stephenson did almost all the typing and much of the clerical work. Thanks are also due the publishers who generously supplied copies of their books which are included in the INDEX.

Directions for Use

The title entry is the main entry and gives the fullest information, including title (with the first line in parentheses when needed to distinguish between poems with the same title); variant titles; full name of author; translator; and symbols for collections in which the poem is to be found. Variant titles and titles with variant first lines are also listed in their alphabetical order, with see references to the main title.

Kitty. See Long time ago ("Once there was a little kitty")
 Long time ago ("Once there was a little kitty")
 Elizabeth Prentiss. EdT—EdTc—HuG
 Kitty. GrC—HuM
 Phantassus. Arno Holz, tr. fr. the German by Ludwig Lewisohn. VaJ

Titles of poems are grouped according to subject, in alphabetical order under a subject heading. The subject entry gives the title of poem; name of author with initials only; first line where needed for identification; variant titles; source title for subordinate selections; and the symbols for the collections in which the poem is to be found.

Youth and age
 Father William ("You are old, Father William, the young man cried") R. Southey. InO
 Father William ("You are old, Father William the young man said") From Alice's adventures in wonderland. L. Carroll. BuP—DaP—JoL
 You are old, Father William. BaT—CaC
 "Shuffle-Shoon and Amber-Locks." E Field. FiP

The author entry gives the full name of the author; title of poem with its variants (first line in parentheses when needed for identification); and the symbols for the collections in which the poem is to be found. Included under the author entry are references from variant titles, and from titles of selections to the source title.

 You are old, Father William. See Alice's adventures in wonderland—Father William

First lines of poems, enclosed in quotation marks, are listed in their alphabetical order with references to the title entry where all the information may be found. Variant first lines are also listed in their alphabetical order. First lines are enclosed in quotation marks even when used as titles.

"Cherrie ripe, ripe, ripe, I say." See Cherry ripe ("Cherry ripe, ripe, ripe, I say")
 "Once there was a little kitty." See Long time ago
 "You are old, Father William, the young man cried." See Alice's adventures in wonderland

When the source of a poem is more familiar than the title of the poem, or when only selections from a longer work are given, such titles are grouped under the source title. All titles subordinated to source titles are also entered in their alphabetical order with references to the source title.

Adoration of the disk by King Akhnaten and Princess Nefer Neferiu Aten

The dead man ariseth and singeth a hymn to the sun

He approacheth the hall of judgment

He cometh forth into the day

He establisheth his triumph

He holdeth fast to the memory of his identity

He is declared true of word

He is like the lotus

He knoweth the souls of the west

He maketh himself one with the only God, whose limbs are the many gods

He singeth in the underworld

He walketh by day

 The dead man ariseth and singeth a hymn to the sun
 He approacheth the hall of judgment
 He cometh forth into the day
 He establisheth his triumph
 He holdeth fast to the memory of his identity
 He is declared true of word
 He is like the lotus
 He knoweth the souls of the west
 He maketh himself one with the only
